Do-Not-Call Implementation Act
Email: christiansona@uwstout.edu

Dear FCC,

It is to my understanding that the Federal Communication Center is implementing a Do-Not-call Act. I believe that this is a positive act. As a student, telemarketers have no respect for my family and me. I do not enjoy when they interrupt my daily schedule. I go to school, then work, and then I come home and eat dinner and do my homework. Most of the unwanted phone calls come around dinner time and that is when I am eating and want to finish my evening. I do understand that is their job, and they need to keep their business running so they have jobs. There are many families, including mine, during dinner and after do not want to get interrupted. Most parents spend time with their children after dinner, getting them ready for bed, and they do not want to get interrupted during that crucial time. I am in that same situation, I want my family to have that quality family time, and ransom phone calls from telemarketers and unacceptable. It happens every night, around the same time. I hope that you take my experience into consideration when trying to approve this “do-not-call act.” I think that it is an intelligent idea, and will let families be closer to each other.

Thank you,

Alexa Christianson
